I am proud to witness how Campus Talk has evolved into a dynamic platform that captures the heartbeat of our institution. At NDIM, we remain committed to nurturing future-ready leaders—individuals who are not only academically sound but also socially conscious, ethically grounded, and globally aware. In a world that is changing faster than ever, adaptability, creativity, and resilience have become indispensable traits. It is heartening to see our students embrace these qualities through their participation in competitions, industry interactions, entrepreneurial ventures, research activities, and community initiatives. This newsletter, in turn, becomes a mirror of their efforts and achievements. The past academic year has been marked by new milestones for NDIM. Our strengthened industry collaborations, enhanced learning infrastructure, and growing alumni network continue to elevate our educational ecosystem. I encourage each one of you to make the most of these opportunities, for they are stepping stones that will shape your professional journeys. I am particularly pleased to see the rising enthusiasm among students for leadership roles on campus. # From the Editorial Desk

As we step into an exciting new phase of growth and recognition, it gives us immense pride to present this edition of Campus Talk, highlighting some of NDIM's remarkable milestones in early 2025. This year marks a significant moment in our journey as NDIM made its first-ever official presence at the Regional Meet 2025, showcasing our commitment to academic excellence, innovation, and national-level collaboration. Our participation not only strengthened NDIM's visibility among leading institutions but also opened new avenues for partnerships and future initiatives. This edition also celebrates the remarkable achievements of NDIM students at the GGSIPU Annual Sports Meet, where our athletes showcased exceptional talent, discipline, and sportsmanship. Competing across multiple events, NDIM students secured notable positions and brought laurels to the institute with their outstanding performances. Their dedication on the field reflects the same spirit of excellence they exhibit in academics and co-curricular pursuits, making the entire NDIM fraternity proud. These accomplishments reaffirm our belief in holistic development and the power of perseverance, teamwork, and passion. We are equally delighted to share that NDIM has been awarded the prestigious VAANI Program Grant by AICTE, a recognition that underscores our dedication to advancing knowledge dissemination, impactful teaching, and technology-enabled learning. This grant reinforces NDIM's role as a progressive institution actively contributing to the nation's educational transformation. Adding further to our achievements, NDIM has successfully secured approval to conduct an ATAL Faculty Development Program (FDP)—a testament to our strong academic rigor, research orientation, and consistent efforts to upskill faculty members across India. Hosting an ATAL FDP second time in a row marks another step toward positioning NDIM as a hub for cutting-edge pedagogy and professional development. As we celebrate these accomplishments, we extend heartfelt gratitude to our faculty, students, alumni, and institutional partners whose continuous support propels NDIM forward. With these new opportunities and recognitions, we remain committed to shaping future leaders, fostering innovation, and strengthening our contribution to the educational ecosystem.

I thank Prof.(Dr.) Anudeep Arora, Director NDIM for proofreading of newsletter.

I had the incredible opportunity to organize and anchor the week-long Faculty Development Program (FDP) held at New Delhi Institute of Management from 21st to 26th July, in collaboration with AICTE. Themed around "Leveraging AI, Automation, and Emerging Technologies in Shaping Digital Marketing", the program brought together experts and educators to explore the evolving digital landscape. Being both a part of the organizing team and the anchor for this prestigious event allowed me to gain valuable hands-on experience in event management, coordination, and public speaking. More importantly, I got to interact with esteemed faculty members and speakers, learning deeply about how emerging technologies are revolutionizing marketing strategies and academic pedagogy. This experience not only enriched my knowledge but also strengthened my leadership and communication skills, giving me a deeper appreciation for the role of innovation in education.

Being a student coordinator for the 6-day FDP was a great learning journey. It gave me a chance to interact with experienced faculty members, professors, and research scholars, which really helped me develop my communication and coordination skills. I've learned how to manage responsibilities and maintain professionalism throughout. This experience has truly helped me grow both personally and professionally.

Reordering management education: Putting analytics before leadership theory Premium

Published - December 24, 2025 01:00 pm IST

AVUSH KUMAR

Management education is undergoing a fundamental reset. As businesses become increasingly data-driven, the profile of an effective leader is changing in ways traditional curricula have been slow to recognise. Today's managers are expected to interpret dashboards as confidently as they inspire teams, question algorithms as critically as they challenge assumptions, and make decisions grounded in evidence rather than instinct alone. Yet, in many classrooms, leadership theory is still taught in isolation before learners have developed the analytical fluency required to understand the realities they will eventually lead.

This sequencing problem matters. Leadership without data literacy risks becoming aspirational rhetoric rather than effective action. In a world where every strategic decision is influenced by metrics, customer acquisition costs, churn rates, supply-chain efficiency, risk models, and predictive forecasts, leaders who cannot read, interpret, and question data are operating at a disadvantage from day one.
